

Reflection

From this assignment, I learned how to write a good research paper. I realized my research paper has many flaws and I needed to know the purpose of a research paper. For example, I didn't do much research about my topic that I was going to write about and I needed to cite the sources correctly. I also needed to use secondary sources for this paper. This paper really helped me to set up a foundation and gained skills that I can apply in other classes next year. I also learned how an author affects early childhood development. For example, Katherine Paterson's works play a great role in children's literature. In her works, there is always a lesson behind it that everyone can apply in the future and states issues that children will face during their process of growth.
